

In an interview with Sophomore Andy Newman, he stated that teenagers enjoy violence in movies because the "action" is "exciting." Since young adults enjoy watching violence in movies, they would enjoy reading about violence in classical literature. The classical drama, Romeo and Juliet contains the climatic fight scene between Tybalt and Mercutio. It is in this scene Tybalt demands that Romeo "turn and draw" in a battle to avenge "the injuries" Romeo has inflicted upon Tybalt (Shakespeare 1075). The vengeance between these two opposing forces would appeal to young adults.
